

The Justice System

Representing: China

Assignment Description: Dialogue is the method in which your racers voices are heard. Over the past couple weeks, you've built your teams rosters and given them all a great deal of depth. Using those documents and your creativity you'll be giving them their unique voices. Your assignment is to create 3 pieces of dialogue per character to give the reader an understanding of how they talk, how their demeanor reflects their actions, and to think "oh, that does sound like something they'd say". We're aiming for realistic conversations that really reflect what you see in the characters you've written.

These pieces of dialogue can vary from a range of different styles. Some common ones to look for are quips/barks, which are small pieces of dialogue that play when something happens to this racer. Unique dialogue interactions within a story between racers both on and off the track. Simple dialogue between teammates. Conversations that occur in hypothetical scenarios that you've made up in the past or present, and so much more. The scenarios you come up with should fall in line with what we know about these racers so far as well as potentially expand on it so the reader can understand the character better.

Along with reaching out to me for help, I recommend looking at my examples. My examples will provide valuable insight on what is expected in this assignment and comments will be left next to the dialogue to help you understand my process when approaching this assignment. My goal is to help you all understand the process when going into an assignment like this and expanding on your now already existing characters.

Coach: Tao Liang

Dialogue

"I get it. It's rough out there, but remember the reason why we're here. We're not just racing for ourselves."

"I'm sorry if my coaching is lacking, but I'm trying. I'm contacting people I know, learning as much as I can, and even practicing and failing hard at racing. I do all that just for this team to succeed."

"I want to thank everyone here for representing the Justice System. I never thought that I could make a difference. But... now with all of you here... I know that we can make more than a difference. Thank you."

Racer #412: Bruna Bao

Dialogue

"I don't want my past to define me. Please, give me a chance. I will do anything to fix my mistakes."

"I understand if none of you want to be near me. All I care about is that we have a common goal."

"Making amends—through racing? This... this seems way too good for me."

Racer #734: Lauro Ivo

Dialogue

"Racing is not always about competition or the thrill—it never was. I want to make sure that I'm racing for a purpose, and I feel that this team can provide me with that purpose."

"At this point, I don't care about your record. Your words and actions already tell me what I need to know."

"You're right. He may have a great, and even admirable ambition, but there are better ways to go about it."

Racer #524: Han Dei

Dialogue

"I'm proud of my current line of work. However, if there are more ways to help my patients, I am more than willing to commit to this team's success."

"I've dealt with patients with even worse records, and even they're capable of being good people. I don't believe it's necessary to push us away from you."

“Does that man not realize what he’s doing to his family?! Oh man, I really want to destroy him in a race, but I suppose you have those honors, Lauro.”
